DEMOCRATS RATIFIED AT AALA LAST NIGHT

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS THE JOLLIFICATION OF THE SUCCESSFUL COUNTY TICKET.

The Democratic ratification at Aala Park last night was, in some respects, an exceptional gathering. The crowd was, if any thing, larger than any other gathering that was held at Aala Park during the campaign. There was the utmost enthusiasm manifested during the speech making. Herbert J. Mossman the chairman of the Democratic County Committee, presided. Ernest Kaai's orchestra and Mrs. Alapai and Miss Kaai rendered the music. The singing of the campaign songs by Kaai made a big hit as usual.

Among those present on the platform were E. B. McClanahan, Col. C. P. Lauke, Frank Harvey, R. H. Trent, Senator-elect Charles McCarthy, Joseph Fern, M. J. Silva, Edward Ingham, H. T. Moore, E. Like, S. Palmer, Jesse Uluhi, Iola Kikahi, Dan Kamahu, Charles Broad, G. J. Waller, E. Williams, registered County Attorney of Hawaii; Fred Wood, Charles Rose, S. K. Hul, J. W. Bipikane and others.

Edward Ingham who was one of the unsuccessful candidates for the legislature read an original and very clever poem entitled "The Closing Scenes." The poem is as follows:

Amid this moribund throng of henchmen stout,
The wall of anguish smote the atmosphere
Like some besotted loafer's lusty shout
When lubricious with campaign booze and beer.

All dives were silent and all games subdued,
The drunks seemed further and the thugs lay low,
As with sad eyes the slinking plunderers viewed
The passing of the graft-prolific show.

The inflated cops that erstwhile copped the gold
Their palms well oiled by thugs of every hue,
Now stood aghast and mutely did behold
Iaukea and his wearers of the blue.

On steam-spined wings the gambler tried his flight
To ply his trade without the law's restraint,
And, like the tall of some high-soaring kite,
The illiterate calf-beats seemed to pale and faint.

The Democratic rooster loudly crew—
Crew long and loud, though Davis fiercely swore—
Swore till the scene assumed a virulent blue,
Relieved anon by streaks of reddest gore.

Where every bird of nocturnal pursuit
Shook the rich plunder from its plumage at morn
To animate the fledglings of the roost,
All now was thugless, empty and forlorn.

Amid all this, the center of the scene,
The white-haired road-boss, with intuitive dread,
Piled his slick apell, and with his jobless mien,
Reflected on the lopping of his head.

Long, but not loud, the endless chain had run
Serenely over wheels with well-greased gears;
Long, but not loud, the memory of the gone
Welled from his eyes a flood of "phony" tears.

At last the chain was snapped—his job was paid;
The new road-boss soon had things on the jump;
The gang got busy and the "has-been" now
Is slumbering peacefully on the garbage dump.

Charles J. McCarthy senator-elect, said that he would introduce a measure simplifying the ballot so that there would not be any chance for a cry of recount.

R. H. Trent said that the Democratic party would not stand for Iaukea building up a police machine but Iaukea was not going to do such a thing.

E. B. McClanahan seconded the idea advanced by Trent.

Frank Harvey one of the supervisors elect, said that he thought the present Republican supervisors were trying to clean out the county treasury so as to embarrass the new supervisors.

Harvey said that the new board which was composed practically of Hawaiians proposed to do well by every body.

Col. C. P. Lauke asked the people to lay aside the prejudices of the campaign and work together for the good of the community, drawing no color line. He had no personal feelings against the present Sheriff and he could only promise the people that he would do his full duty when he assumed office.

The Sheriff-elect was loudly cheered as he concluded his modest speech, the cheering continuing for some minutes.

For the Deputy Sheriff-elect, W. P. Jarrett, who was absent, the chairman tendered his thanks to the people for the big majority they had given him.

W. A. Kinney addressed the crowd in Hawaiian and in English. He said that the rebuke that the Hawaiians had administered to Brown for his ill-considered speech should be a wholesome lesson to plandering politicians. The speaker predicted that within ten years there would be an Hawaiian governor and a white delegate, because they would be the best men for the position and the old race feeling would be obliterated.

A number of other speakers were heard.

SIEMSEN'S COAST RECORD

The third man in the attempted murder of A. Behrend is named Harry. He had dinner with Simpson and Dabner at the home of Joseph Lercara on Friday night, stayed with them all night, and ate breakfast there next morning. He was seen with them at Octavia and Union streets at 1 o'clock Saturday, by Mrs. Von Hofen. He was tall, of light complexion, with blue eyes, and very rough in appearance.

The members of the Von Hofen family are nearly prostrated over the notoriety which has come to them through their unwitting association with the thugs.

Joseph Lercara of 1784 Union street for five months was the landlady of Simpson and Dabner and became very intimate with both, regarding them as model youths. On Friday afternoon Simpson took a friend named Harry home with him and invited him to dine at Lercara's home. This friend stayed with the two that night and breakfasted with them on Saturday morning.

About 10 o'clock they left the house, but stopped at Lercara's shoe store, at 1808 Union street, for a few moments. Simpson introduced his friend to Lercara, who says that he does not remember any other name than Harry.

"I am all broken up over this affair," said Lercara yesterday. "I esteemed those young men as members of my own family, and always considered them model youths. They came to my place shortly after the fire, and engaged a room. They were always orderly and polite, and paid their bills promptly. Therefore, I had little to do with them, and no reason to suspect them. When they first came, they were apparently working. They used to leave the house early, in their working clothes, and did not return until late. They dressed at that time like men who were doing hard manual labor."

"About six weeks ago they ceased to leave early in the morning and began to dress very well. They were in and out during the day, and were evidently not working. They explained this by saying that they had worked hard for six months and were taking a little vacation. They always had money, and therefore I did not meddle with their business. I just thought they were lucky that they did not have to work all the time."

"Dabner was an unusually quiet fellow, Simpson was very different. He did all the talking, and could converse on any subject. At all times he was polished and showed marks of good breeding. He was orderly and quiet, and I remarked to my wife that, if I could find two more such good lodgers, I would be willing to fit up my front parlor for them. In fact, I tried to make them feel perfectly at home in my place, and they spent many evenings with myself and my wife, playing cards or talking. They talked freely on general subjects, but never discussed their private affairs. I never saw them appear at all nervous or excited, and we never found any blood-stained articles about their room. The detectives searched the room and took away everything, but found nothing of that sort."

"I understand that they had several contracts to rebuild chimneys in the neighborhood, but I do not know of anybody who employed them."

WOMAN DESCRIBES HARRY.

Mrs. Albert von Hofen, mother of the girl who was engaged to marry Simpson, saw the mysterious Harry at 1 o'clock on Saturday at the corner of Union and Octavia streets. She was introduced to him, but, like Lercara, does not remember his last name. She noticed the rough appearance of the stranger and spoke to her daughter about it.

Later in the day, and before the arrest of Simpson, Miss Von Hofen asked Simpson where and why he had picked up with such a rough-looking customer. He replied that the man was one of the foremen in his employ and not so bad as he looked.

"We always had the greatest respect for Simpson," said Mrs. Von Hofen. "He was at all times a gentleman in appearance, and he told a good story of his business and of his family. He seemed very prosperous, but he said that his business was good. Among other jobs he mentioned having secured the contract to repair the Presidio General Hospital. I did not for a minute dream that he was a crook, or he would not have been tolerated in my house. We greatly deplore the notoriety which this affair has brought upon us, and I am ashamed to walk on the street after the publicity we have gained through our unfortunate acquaintance with this smooth rogue. We are glad that it is no worse, however, and that our daughter escaped in time."

"If we had only known what he was!" cried the sister of Hilda Von Hofen last evening. "We thought he was a gentleman, but now we have found him out to be a rogue. We are sorry we ever knew him. I would like to see him hang, and I would put the halter about his neck. We have been sheltering a dog in our house, and we did not know it. This is a terrible ordeal for my sister, and in fact for every member of the family."

SPOKE OF MRS. DREYER.

"Tomorrow my sister was to have gone to Sacramento with him, and visited her sister for a couple of weeks," continued Miss Von Hofen. She went with him once before, but his sister was out of town, and they came back. He claimed to have received a telegram from his sister in Pasadena yesterday, telling him to meet her in Sacramento. He talked a great deal about the wealth of Mrs. Dreyer, his sister.

"Simpson always had plenty of money, and spent it prodigally. He paid $60 for his outfit, and threw his money around with utter disregard. My sister had a narrow escape."

"Dabner was the quietest kind of a boy. He called a few times, but scarcely spoke a word. He seemed to feel embarrassed, and I tried to make him feel more comfortable, but he would not talk. They say still water runs deep. Simpson told me that he found Dabner rag-picking in Pasadena, took him up and made a man of him. He said he supported him, and bought all Dabner's clothes."

THOUGHT JACK A GENTLEMAN.

"I never dreamed that Jack was anything but a gentleman until last night," said Hilda Von Hofen yesterday. "He spent lots of money, but said he earned it. He came to me last night at the manicure parlors where I work and told me he was going to the 'Chronicle' with my picture. As he was leaving he showed me his cut finger, and said that he had been held up. Earlier he showed me a roll of bills, and said that he had drawn $1000 from the bank. He had safe deposit box at the Western National Bank. He went to a drug store, where he was found by Police-headquarters. He did not go there voluntarily to report the hold-up. He claimed to be faint from pain."

"I met him at Post street and Van Ness avenue at 1 o'clock on the day of the Japanese bank robbery. He seemed perfectly natural. Some boys were selling extra papers on the street, and I bought one. I showed him the headlines, and said, 'What do you think of that?' He replied, 'I think all of these Japs ought to be killed off.' He seemed in no way nervous. Several times, I have talked with him about these dreadful hold-ups, but he has never displayed the slightest excitement."

CALLS AT "CHRONICLE" OFFICE.

Simpson did not go to the "Chronicle" office Saturday afternoon with the picture, as he had already taken it there, with the request that it be run in the society columns, on Thursday afternoon. At that time he represented himself as the brother of Miss von Hofen.

Albert von Hofen corroborates his wife's statements regarding the good appearance of Simpson, but says that he did not know him personally more than a month. Every night Simpson called at a store on the corner of Union and Octavia streets, to buy cigars. He seldom had Dabner with him, and was never accompanied by anybody else. None of the shopkeepers or residents on the street remember having seen Simpson with the mysterious "Henry."

MRS. ASHTON IS WEDDED ONCE MORE

SAN FRANCISCO SOCIETY SET A GAG BY THE MARRIAGE OF MRS. FRANK ASHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—The marriage on September 29 in San Rafael of Mrs. Frank Ashton, a former society belle of Honolulu, and Augustus Munro of Berkeley has set society agog when they recalled the times that Mrs. Ashton has been the center of a romance.

She was Miss Mary Coney of one of the most aristocratic families to be found in the Hawaiian Islands. Frank Ashton, a capitalist from the United States, courted and won the fair Miss Coney. They lived happily for two years, when Mrs. Ashton came into public notice by a sensational divorce suit. It was shown in the evidence that she had been in correspondence with Rear Admiral Merry of the United States navy. The letters written by the naval officer to Mrs. Ashton caused some of the sensations of the trial.

A divorce was granted, but Ashton would not be parted from his little daughter, Leonine, whom the court awarded to Mrs. Ashton, and one night about two years ago took her and ran away with her. The sensational kidnapping of the child, coupled with the fact that Mrs. Ashton pursued her former husband and daughter through Mexico and all along the coast and finally overtook them at Seattle, occupied public attention at the time.

Finally the reconciliation between herself and her former husband, Ashton, resulting in their remarriage at Redwood City, brought the Honolulu woman again into public notice.

The next chapter in the life of Mrs. Ashton took place last winter, when Ashton was drowned near the Alameda mole.

Mr. and Mrs. Munro are now living at 1721 Grove street, Berkeley—Examiner.
